

Summer Peak Rate

Enabling Michigan's clean energy transformation

What's New

Summer Peak Rate is the updated standard electric rate that encourages residential customers to take advantage of lower-cost electricity.

For most of the year, the price of electricity will remain flat, but in the summer, you will see peak pricing at certain times during the weekdays.

What to Expect

Each year, June 1 through Sept. 30, on-peak pricing will be in effect Monday-Friday from 2 to 7 p.m. – when energy use and the cost of energy are at their highest.

If you don't make any changes to your energy use, most people will see less than a $2/month increase to their summer bills. Making simple changes like doing dishes in the morning or laundry on the weekends will help you get the most out of this new rate.

You can save even more by enrolling in additional Clean Energy programs and upgrading to energy efficient products. Visit MiCleanEnergy.com to see what programs or products might be right for you.

Why the Change

A clean energy transformation is taking hold in our country – and we're helping to lead it, but we can't do it alone. Changing the way you engage with your electric use will help lower energy costs while also leaving the planet cleaner for future generations.

Summer Peak Rate helps with this by:

Rewarding you for reducing electricity use during on-peak hours.

Giving you more control over your electricity use and monthly bill.

Contributing to a cleaner, smarter energy future for Michigan by reducing our demand for electricity and avoiding the need to build new power plants.
